Bonfire guest and Shared Mission Advisor

Formed Doongalik Studios in the 1970s with the late Jackson Burnside III, architect, artist and cultural advocate. The couple have spent their lifetime committed to promoting the country's outstanding artistic talent which they firmly believe can establish The Bahamas as an international center of creativity.

Pam is also President and co-founder of Creative Nassau, formed in 2008 with a group of passionate Bahamians who wished to showcase their unique Bahamian culture to the world, whilst actively developing a Creative Tourism model to ensure that by the year 2020 more persons will travel to The Bahamas to experience its art, culture and heritage rather than just its sun, sand and sea.

In March 2014, Creative Nassau made application to the UNESCO Creative Cities Network (UCCN) for Nassau to be designated as a Creative City of Crafts and Folk Arts and was successful in obtaining this membership on December 1, 2014.

In March 2015, Creative Nassau's Pam and Patti, President and Vice-President respectively, began hosting a weekly Radio Show in Nassau to talk about cultural and creative issues, compliments of Sir Charles Carter, owner of IslandFM 102.9.
